STREET NAME	WARD	POSTCODE	YEAR	DERIVATION
Bennett Street	Mapperley	NG3 5GP	Pre 1902	Charles Bennett (1832-1909) was a local lad who started work in the brickyard at age 9. He gradually worked his way up to become foreman and then manager of Nottingham Patent Brick Company (NPBC). He became a town councillor, an alderman and a magistrate. He allowed the Mapperley Methodist Church to meet in the NPBC offices and encouraged outdoor evangelical services on the site. He gave the land for Mapperley Methodist Church and he and his family (he had 3 wives and 9 children) raised much of the funding. He was also a trustee and committee member for the association that established the Porchester Gardens estate. Bennett Street (off Woodborough Road facing the brick works site (now occupied by Aldi)) is named after him and his family home still stands on the corner of Bennett Street, now converted into three flats)

Holyoake Road	St James	NG3 6DX		George Jacob Holyoake (13 April 1817 – 22 January 1906), was a British secularist, co-operator, and newspaper editor. He coined the term "secularism" in 1851 and the term "jingoism" in 1878. He edited a Secularist paper, the Reasoner, from 1846 to June 1861, and a Co-operative paper, The English Leader, from 1864-67. There appears to be no link with Nottingham, but perhaps the presence of a Co-Op store on the road is a link.
